In June 2003, Noble paid an option fee of $15 million to Maersk for the right to acquire the rig, resulting in a total aggregate price of $47.9 million. The rig is presently in the territorial waters of the United Arab Emirates. The unit will begin an 880-day contract in Qatar in mid-September after an upgrade program. The rig was renamed the Noble Cees van Dieman. Noble also has an option to purchase the Maersk Valiant jackup.

Basic Energy buys new rigs, acquires company

Midland-based Basic Energy Services signed a contract with Taylor Rigs LLC of Catoosa, Okla, for the manufacture of 12 new well servicing rigs to be delivered beginning this October through April 2005. The purchase contract provides an option for Basic to purchase 12 additional rigs under essentially the same terms. According to Taylor, the agreement represents the largest commitment for the purchase of new equipment by a well servicing contractor in the US in more than 20 years.

Additionally, Basic Energy recently completed the acquisition of Western Oil Well Service Company of Glendive, Montana. The purchase expands the company’s well servicing presence into the Williston Basin of the Rocky Mountains. Prior to this acquisition, Basic Energy operated 15 rigs in the Powder River Basin of Wyoming and the Uinta and Piceance Basins of Colorado and Utah.

Parker sells jackups, platform rigs

Parker Drilling closed the sale of its Gulf of Mexico jackups and platform rigs for net proceeds of approximately $40 million. Hercules Assets LLC purchased jackup rigs 11J, 15J, 20J, 21J and 22J and platform rigs 2P, 3P, 10P and 41P and their related assets. Proceeds from the sale will be used to retire debt. The sale does not include jackups 14J or 25J. Earlier this year, Parker received insurance proceeds for 14J and applied those proceeds to debt reduction. The company is pursuing offers for 25J separate from the transaction with Hercules Assets.
